That's a stark turn for a business that had been booming in the early 00's, when DVD sales peaked and the U.S. Census Bureau found that 24.7 million people in the U.S. went to the movies in 2007. According to the Census Bureau, the number of moviegoers declined to 18.9 million in 2011. The bureau also notes that TV viewing is booming: Nielsen's recent estimates show that there were just over 75 million people watching live TV on a TV set, with roughly 40 million watching TV via the internet. However, that's still around 40 million people less than were watching live TV in 2006. Live TV viewing peaked in 2006, at just over 73 million people, and was back down to just under 64 million in 2011. Meanwhile, DVD sales are still going up, despite the decline in movie attendance. The Census Bureau found that DVD sales rose by three-quarters of a percent, from 12.4 million units in 2007 to 14.4 million units in 2011. These figures are especially alarming when one considers that the number of people who have high-speed internet access at home has nearly doubled since 2006. .winchars = 0, /* dont need winchars / .fsync = NULL, / dont need fsync() */ .unlock_key = NULL, 82157476af
